GIFTS IN KIND
Utah, USA

In the Western world, December heralds the Christmas season, a season celebrating the birth of Christ with lights, decorated trees, carols, feasts and family. Christmas is also marked by a tradition of gift-giving wherein celebrants give gifts in honor of the gift of God's Son to mankind.

Gift-giving, however, is not unique to Christmas. Across cultures and continents, gift-giving is part of the celebration of many of the world's holidays: Christmas, Hanukkah, Passover, Ramadan, Eid al-Fitr, Deepavali, Kwanzaa, Chinese New Year and more.

These gifts remind us of the bounty we enjoy and of our responsibility – and privilege – to serve God and each other by sharing of our abundance with those around us. Such giving is motivated by and produces a spirit of love, generosity and compassion that reflects the spirit of the holiday.

In the charitable medical resource work done by Globus Relief, these gifts go by a specific name: gifts in kind. "Gifts in kind" refer to any gift made in the form of tangible goods (as opposed to financial assets). It is these gifts, gifts in kind, that principally fuel Globus Relief. Each year, donors give an average of $50 million of medical and related goods as gifts in kind to Globus Relief.

It is also gifts in kind that are generally given in the world's holiday celebrations. The term itself, "gift in kind," reminds us that there are several "kinds of gifts" that one can give. Gifts of goods. Gifts of money. Gifts of concern and care. Gifts of time. Gifts of expertise and counsel.

We receive all of these here at Globus Relief. From product and funds given by generous corporate, non-profit and individual donors, to time and expertise given by scores of volunteers and industry experts.

What kind of gifts will you give this holiday season to your family, friends, community and the world at large? We are grateful to the many donors and volunteers that have given their "kind of gifts" to Globus Relief. It is because of them we can continue to give our gift of life and health to the world this Christmas season and beyond.
